These are challenging times. Business as we know it is rapidly changing and we're all being subjected to extraordinary pressure, regulations and scrutiny by everyone around us. This includes the companies we deal with, the regulators, our competitors, our clients, and even our associates. At Don Xavier Global Motivation, we have carefully researched and analysed business competitiveness in the 21st century and concluded that being good isn't good enough anymore and even being great only makes you one of many. Therefore, you must be consistently on the hunt for excellence and differentiation to succeed. Through our extensive research on the behavior of successful people, we realized that the successful have a different kind of behavior. They possess a different quality of thinking and emotion that guides their actions and drives them to effectively take action. Successful people understand that if they know specifically what they want, and why they want it, they can figure out how to create or achieve anything that they focus on.
